SB 1327 – (GLAZER) TAX CREDIT TO SUPPORT LOCAL JOURNALISM

What Does SB 1327 Do?

This bill uses a refundable employment tax credit to provide financial support to newsrooms that hire or retain local reporters. It helps a full range of community news outlets – tiny neighborhood or ethnic publications, major metro dailies, for profits and nonprofits, digital and print. The goal of this bill is to revive local news while preserving editorial independence.

How Does SB 1327 Benefit Newsrooms?

Local Newsrooms and broadcast stations will be given a tax credit to employ and hire new journalists. Employees must live in California and spend at least 30 hours gathering, preparing, recording, directing the recording of, producing, collecting, photographing, writing, editing, reporting, presenting, or publishing original local community news for dissemination to the local community. The primary purpose of the news organization receiving the tax credits must be to serve a local community in California by providing local news.

Example

A weekly with 4 eligible staff (reporter and editors) making $65,000 that then hires a fifth at the same salary would get nearly $270,000 over 2 years. A newspaper that has – and keeps -- 55 editorial workers at the same salary would get over $2.1 million over 2 years. Here are the new tiers for the employment credit:
